

News in brief & Future events

Archaeological Illustrators' Group by Jude Harris

Under the careful tutelage of professional illustrator Nick Griffiths, we have started to sift through and draw some of the great variety of objects stored at the Bath Royal and Literary Scientific Institute in Queen's Square.

The weather influences our activities - if fine spring and summer days coincide with our monthly Friday session, we have been able to sit in the courtyard and draw the stone sarcophagi and the collection of various decorated stones. These are mostly of unknown provenance but we hope our research and recording may through light on their origins. Winter and rain see us inside, concentrating on pottery and smaller items. Our drawings and research will eventually be channelled into the BRLSI Virtual Museum site.

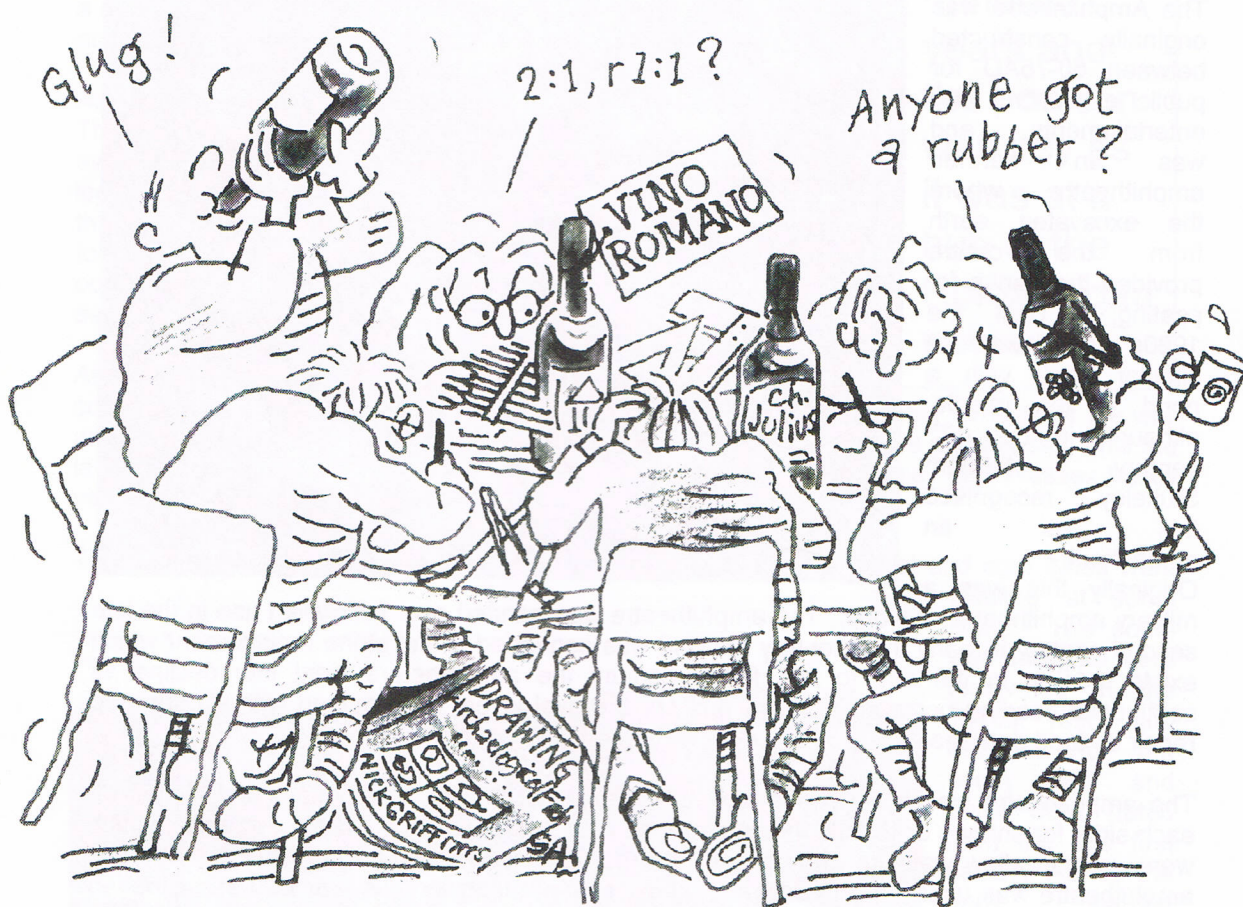

Illustration by Sally Phillips