EDITORIAL

As many of you will know 1994 has been a very difficult year for the society. The Officials and Committee were left with a lot of loose ends to try and tidy up as well as try to continue as usual. Due to these difficulties it was not found possible to produce a Camertonia for the year 93-94. This issue therefore covers two years of the society's activities.

I volunteered to edit this issue of the Camertonia as I felt it was a lot to ask of Sue Langdon (Hon Secretary) to have to bear the entire burden of sorting out the Societies affairs and put together a winter programme of lectures.

I have included in this issue the notes of Peter Greening's Chairman's Report for last year and two reports on excursions which were submitted for last year's Camertonia.

As you will now know the Society has appointed me Hon Director of Excavations. I feel somewhat subdued to think that this was William Wedlake's title and I am honoured that the society has asked me to attempt to follow in his footsteps.

I know that the society was chiefly set up to be an active Archaeological organisation, a possibility in the 1950's. Times have very much changed and there are many constraints on Archaeological activities. However I am happy to be able to offer practical experience in field archaeology for those who wish to be involved. Thanks to Downside Abbey and School a programme of archaeological research has begun in Stratton-on-the-Fosse. Anyone interested can find out more if they contact me (Jayne Lawes) on 0761 431741 or come and speak to me at one of the meetings.
